I made a chatbot that lets you SPEAK to a French teacher

Resources

Hi r/learnfrench! I made a site that lets you speak to an AI teacher in French to practice listening and, well, speaking! What do you think? What should I improve?👉 <https://glinglish.com/free>

What I have now:

- Multilingual speech recognition: ask a question in English, get an answer in French
- Feedback on your grammar
- Suggestions: get samples sentences to help you keep the conversation going
- Speed: choose a lower speed (beginners) or a faster one (advanced levels)

i just tried it and it's awesome! i always get too nervous to speak french with native speakers, at least now i can at least practice thinking in french without the pressure

\(–\) ↑ 31 ↓ Reply ... tsyrak OP • 2y ago

Thank you so much! Thinking in the target language is so underrated. We use our native language to think more than we use it to speak. Writing allows to "think on paper". ChatGPT allows to think and get feedback on our ideas. I hope I can make this a tool for thinking out loud and learn from speaking all at once!

↑ 12 ↓ Reply ... Embe007 • 2y ago • Edited 2y ago

Holy shit. This is fabulous! I speak a fairly fluent conversational French but of course I would like to be much better, with more nuanced grammar - something that is only possible with more conversation.

Would you be able to put the monthly price in the FAQ or something? I forget what it was and it wants my email again to tell me. There's no harm in being upfront about the price. People will pay for useful things.

Think about marketing this to classes eg: have a group access price as well. Here in (English) Canada, French language instruction is compulsory for 6 years and there is never enough conversational time in the classroom. Even studying beyond that, one is always taking a French class with other Anglophones (or 'allophones'...other language speakers). Using this app as an adjunct to those classes will not threaten French instruction or the jobs of French teachers. On the contrary, it will make those classes much more effective. Group access priceu/tsyrak, get to it. Then, email the provincial Ministries of Education and tell them about it; this could easily be integrated into our compulsory French instruction classes. The case is similar in Quebec for English instruction. (Education is provincial jurisdiction in Canada).

Also, later when you're making more money from this, think about endangered languages (Aboriginal, regional, Welsh, Irish etc). There are many that are on the brink of extinction. All of those communities (and their idea-less national governments) would support something like this to sustain those languages. Reach out to a very visible one (like Irish) and it will spread like wildfire. Great work!!

edit: spelling

Amazing ideas! Wouldn't have believed in it on my own, but coming from someone else and seeing all the nice people here changes everything.

Not wanting to waste a good idea, I've added Irish just now. It'll go live at night when (if?) no one uses the program :)

I gotta be honest and must say results have been pretty disappointing with it. I put my heart and soul into it, but it's getting little traction. I cannot be OBJECTIVE (it's my baby! 🥺 😅), but I can implement anything you guys will ask for 😊

I don't know if you publicised elsewhere, but it's only been three hours! A lot of people won't even have seen it yet, and when they do, might want time to explore before commenting.

Hope you get some good feedback soon. I will be playing around with it later in the day.

(maybe this is more a European sub, but it's still only 8:45am EST!)

This is a great foundation - it's amazing what you've accomplished. With some of those features you're considering, and some UI/UX work you are going to have a n incredibly compelling and marketable product.

It's great to have this gateway to speaking practice. It's something every learner needs.

Thank you for your work.

Wow, this is really good. Speaking is my worst facet of french yet it sends every word I say correctly (it is also very nice that it will correct larger errors but not be hyper focused on every little error, it seems good at interpreting). The responses are great too. This is what I imagine duolingo's new ai is like yet I don't have access to that even though my family has a premium plan that costs over $100/year, need to pay about twice that for the even higher tier. This is amazing for a free site.

One suggestion I have though. I see in the description of premium it increases the amount of prompts you get, but there doesn't seem to be any indication of how many prompts I have left with the free version. I think it is better to see the amount remaining rather than randomly hitting it, but maybe that is better to encourage subscription.

I don't claim to be the strongest speaker or to have a great accent, but it understood my ça va bien et toi ? as, and I quote, "So we're gonna come back and we're gonna pose for the panel on I."

Edit: went to try the English one and it doesn't capture everything I'm saying properly. Not sure the issue, but I'm sure I speak my native language just fine. Whatever people's feelings on Duolingo, it usually understands my French just fine. I think something is up with how the speech recognition and this AI are interacting.

Not trying to be a downer, but I figured you may want to know if there's a bug or compatibility problem.

- Good: it lets you ask a question say, in English about French.
- Not so good: sometimes it'll mix things up. e.g. it'll think Bulgarian is Russian.

The issue is more marked for smaller languages (which is why I disabled it for Bulgarian and Hungarian.)

However it works well enough most of the time and usually great in one's native language. Did you maybe have a lot of background noise?

Might add an option to do only monolingual speech recognition to avoid the issue entirely.

This is awesome!

1. What's the cost of subscribing? Is it the same per month and annually?
2. I started speaking with the bot and it was wonderful. At one point my voice recording got stuck on "sending" and I couldn't move forward from there, but the suggestions were super helpful.
3. A dictionary would be great, since I'm a beginner there were some words I didn't know and it would be nice to have a quick definition for any words used by the bot or in the suggestions.

Amazing work! Thank you for sharing with us!

This is really great, the speech recognition is perfect. And the responses are relevant and keep the conversation going well. I did ask it if we could tutoyer each other and it only did for one response and then went back to vous, but not a big deal.

You could advertise on Facebook and I'm sure you would get quite a few interested people if the advertisement is good.(I've seen lots of annoying ads for things like this)

I would like more tiers to the pricing. Like 500 credits for $10. $30 is a lot to spend for something I'm not sure I'll use consistently.

2 Reply ...

tsyrak OP • 2y ago

Thank you for the feedback, très utile !

- Good to hear, I'll add an option to choose the level of formality for tu/vous.
- I use AdBlocks everywhere and hate ads. Will have to think about Facebook but you may be right.
- I'll make the free tier more generous ASAP. Trying to keep pricing simple but you may be right here too, will have to give it some thought 😊

Thanks again, helps me prioritize.

It just said this:

Désolé, j'ai fait une erreur de frappe dans ma réponse précédente. En français, "se passer" est généralement utilisé avant l'adverbe. Donc, au lieu de dire "aller se passer bien", on dirait plutôt "aller bien se passer". On place l'adverbe "bien" avant le verbe "se passer" pour obtenir la phrase correcte. J'espère que cela a clarifié les choses pour toi !

I'm not completely fluent, but I'm pretty sure it contradicts itself here. I think I accidentally gaslit it just by trying to ask fairly straightforward questions, which isn't very good if you are trying to learn and it changes its answers every time.

(-) Up 2 Down Reply ...

Skip to main contentLog In

There are ways to make grammatical questions better, but I'll need a little more time. In any case it's still correct the vast majority of the time as it is.

With all this being said, case in point:

- ça va bien se passer [correct]
- ça va se passer bien [not so correct, the meaning is clear but the word order is awkward]

I hope this helps!

u/tsyrak thank you for wanting to make the free offer more generous as things go! i'm a struggling unemployed person with disability but see language learning as a potential tool to improve my future. So this would help immensely!

I did a quick play around with the product and I love it so much already! it's great that I have time to think and reply without the social pressure. And I absolutely love that there's suggestions for replies and ability to translate the whole sentence. This has made me WANT to practice my French and has ignited the spark for it again after so many years of reluctance. so thank you very much.

The only constructive thought I have is, would you consider implementing a feature where you can hover over the word and the definition/conjugation for it will pop up? and the ability to save those words/definitions to go over and learn again. for example, kinda what LingQ has.

↑ 2Reply

Salut! Thank you so much for the nice words! Will increase the free tier to an extent today and increase again later as the product grows.

which can be improved.

1. Output of AI is always so long & unnecessary sometimes. Also it is too formal sometimes, can we reduce content & use different tones?
2. Many times I do not have right words or expressions and I expect AI to correct my mistakes and provide better phrases. Right now AI just takes on what i said & builds on top of it.

I tried the app in French and it responded well. Then I went to Spanish and it gave me some Russian, then English transcript, as others have said. I went on to explain it that Duolingo hears me fine etc etc, It stayed in Spanish as I went on, until it told me I had run out of free conversation.

And me thinking the whole time it was free. $30 or so a month is a bit rough.

Also, if I get my wife to use this in French, she'd better not see Cyrillic stuff on her phone, she might get really insulted about her accent...

So it is a really interesting and tempting platform but I am not sure what to do next.

1

Skip to main contentLog In

French) but it's also what's sometimes causing issues with it. It depends on people's accent (hopefully no one will feel insulted!) so if I say something in English with a really strong French accent it'll pick it up as French. It also depends on sentences (a French sentence with a perfect accent once got picked up as Chinese, because it contained lots of [ʃ] sounds.)

Even then I've kept multilingual speech recognition the default because it felt so useful and still works most of the time. But I guess I'll just add an option to stick to a monolingual speech recognition. This'll get rid of the issue entirely and improve speech recognition overall.

This is extremely cool! I bumbled my A1-self through a conversation in French that went into some detail on the video game Warframe, which was startling. There aren't even many humans I can talk to about WF in English. 😊

I'm a developer who's kept abreast of AI chat stuff in general. Modern AI chat systems are showing a willingness to completely fabricate facts and knowledge during conversations. How are you managing the system such that folks won't get incorrect grammar and vocab suggestions? (I'm less worried about it lying to me about Warframe, personally, but that's also a space where it could.)

tsyrak OP • 2y ago

Skip to main contentLog In

on ChatGPT. Now, in my experience, English works extremely well, meaning you'll fairly rarely get made-up stuff. Same for major languages (French, Spanish...). Smaller languages (looking at you Hungarian... 🇭🇺🇭🇺) are waaay much more prone to the issue. (Might have to do with the size and quality of the corpus used for training.)

Philosophically, it's a case of being okay if things are imperfect. A chatbot that makes things up now and then is still much more useful than a non-existing chatbot. With language learning the stakes are low: people will mimic what they see and what they see is incredibly correct the vast majority of the time. Expecting AI to progress fast and the amount of errors on grammar/vocab to be at that of a human teacher real quick.

But it's just my two cents :)

I'll take a look at it when I'm ready to practice speaking. For now, I'm learning to listen and I just found Evie, an app to let me read a book and have it read to me in French (using Google's language tools).

I've used an AI app for some conversation, but it's keyboard typing and that lets me make lots of mistakes, like Gliglish would, and continue the conversation.
